

TAMI, EWING'S SARCOMA

A 19-year-old college student in 1982 whose Ewing's Sarcoma limited her left arm's range of motion, Tami's youthful aspirations of performing on stage are now more likely to be realized by her daughter, who has followed in Mommy's footsteps with her love of dance. "What became more important to me than the stage are my two children—who were unlikely possibilities after my treatment—and entering medicine," she says. "I told my doctor, I'll be back. Not just as a cancer survivor but as a partner." She not only fulfilled on her promise by becoming her physician's Oncology Clinical Nurse Specialist, she's since been victorious over breast cancer as well.
